Joint Call for Papers: EATAW 2019

The tenth EATAW conference offers two publication opportunities: a conference issue of the Journal of Academic Writing (JoAW) containing articles and shorter pieces, and a WAC Clearinghouse book comprised of full-length chapters and reflections. This second call offers some additional detail and minor revision compared to the call distributed in July, 2019.

JoAW conference issue

Selected papers from the EATAW 2019 conference will be published in a special issue of JoAW, EATAW's international, peer-reviewed journal that focuses on the teaching, tutoring, researching, administration and development of academic writing in higher education in Europe: https://publications.coventry.ac.uk/index.php/joaw. JoAW is relevant to teachers, scholars, and programme managers across disciplines and across the world who are interested in conducting, debating and learning from research into best practices in the teaching of writing. This issue will be guest edited by Magnus Gustafsson and Andreas Eriksson (Chalmers University of Technology, Sweden), with support from Lisa Ganobcsik-Williams and George Ttoouli (Coventry University, England).

EATAW 2019 presenters only may submit scholarly papers for consideration. Submissions should follow the general submission guidelines and be in the form of a 5,000-word journal article (excluding references and graphics). They should reflect the themes and content covered in your conference presentation. Papers can be theoretical, empirical, or experience-based, but must offer an explicit original contribution, refer to existing debates or issues, and demonstrate an appropriate methodology or approach.

Shorter pieces appropriate for the following journal sections are also welcome:

Teaching practice: The 10-minute presentations on teaching-related designs, development or experience from EATAW2019 can be written up in order to share them with JoAW readers. These should be below 3,000 words and appropriately referenced, with an emphasis on sharing practice with audiences beyond the conference's context.

Posters: Posters from EATATW2019 providing visual presentations on specific topics, small-scale projects, or research work still in progress may be submitted as PDF files. All poster submissions should be accompanied by an explanatory text of c. 500 words to provide background as well as follow-up from the conference.

Dialogues: JoAW publishes dialogue pieces and invites responses. If you are interested in initiating a dialogue or pursuing a hot button from the conference, please submit:

- a short abstract (max 50 words);
- a focused, limited bibliography, to draw out the context;
- a brief manuscript (maximum 750 words).

Edited collection: Academic Writing at Intersections in Europe

This edited collection will be the first book-length publication produced in connection with the biennial EATAW conference. Edited by Magnus Gustafsson and Andreas Eriksson (Chalmers University of Technology, Sweden), Academic Writing at Intersections in Europe will be featured as part of the WAC Clearinghouse 'International Exchanges on the Study of Writing Series' (Series Editors Terry Myers Zawacki, Joan Mullin, and Magnus Gustafsson). The collection, thus, offers a possibility of reaching a potentially larger and wider readership for issues that concern the EATAW-community.

Joint Call for Papers: EATAW 2019

The book will serve as a conference collection for longer pieces from the 10th EATAW conference in 2019, and potentially as an account of EATAW's early steps and its development. The Call for Chapters will also be distributed via the EATAW listserv. Overview contributions, reflections, and invited chapters from former EATAW Board members, previous conference organisers, and founding members may be solicited in addition to chapters arising from the conference. Adding this historical element to the book may mean dividing it into sections (past, present, future).

The editors are seeking 10-12 book-length chapters of approximately 8,000-10,000 words, which will be framed by an Introduction and a Closing Reflection. Chapters must be written in English but first-language material may be used in analysis. Chapters may be descriptive pieces, theoretically-oriented work, or empirical studies. It will be possible to publish findings or suggestions from Roundtables, Teaching practice sessions, Workshops, Posters, and Symposia. For a full-length chapter in the collection, it might also be possible to combine conference contributions from more than one author into one. We do not expect an even distribution across the possible chapter contribution formats. Instead, we expect to structure the collection based on contributions and provide section introductions to guide readers throughout the book.

Call for Papers

This is a joint Call for Papers, and submissions will be reviewed by the Editors and JoAW's review board through a double blind peer review process. All contributions will be submitted to the JoAW system, and authors will have the possibility to indicate which of the publications they consider their contribution is appropriate for, as 'Comments for the Editor' available during the submission process. Editors may suggest moving contributions between the two publications.

There will be a two-step submission process:

1. For all submission types, the first step is to submit an abstract (between 400-600 words) outlining your proposed contribution. The closing date for abstract submissions is September 30th 2019. The abstract submissions will be used for screening and, where relevant, for distributing contributions between the two publications.

2. If your abstract is accepted, the submission deadline for full manuscripts for consideration and peer review is January 31st 2020.

The submission platform in JoAW contains additional information about the submission processes for the two publications including JoAW guidelines and criteria specific for the edited collection: https://publications.coventry.ac.uk/index.php/joaw/about/submissions#authorGuidelines.

The CFP information and links to the submission page as well as criteria are available on the EATAW2019 web. We will also post updates of the process there: https://2019.eataw.eu/post-eataw2019-publications/

We look forward to receiving your submissions!
